In studying at a university, nothing will come to you naturally. You have to seek it out on your own. Involve yourself aggressively in your learning. That process will help you grow. Moreover, you will discover new things and encounter various people along the way. It is important that you have the courage to open yourself to the outside world.

Specialization

Japanese language education

Brief explanation regarding specialization

I predominately research classroom studies for Japanese language subjects. In particular, I specialize in reading instruction at elementary, middle and high schools. My research also touches on the peripheral domains of school libraries and educational methods, which bear a deep connection with reading instruction.
